REFERENCE GUIDE FOR CHILD WELFARE AND ATTENDANCE

A BRIEF HISTORY OF THE SERVICES IN LOUISIANA

The Visiting Teacher Program in the State of Louisiana was created by legislative act in 1944 when the first compulsory school attendance law was enacted in Louisiana – Act 239 of the 1944 Legislature. The law provided for the employment of a state director of attendance and one visiting teacher for each school system, the concept being that non-attendance at school was symptomatic and that causes should be identified and appropriate services given.

In 1945 the first State Director, Mr. Gordon Webb, and thirteen visiting teachers were appointed. Subsequently, all sixty-four parishes and the three city school systems in Louisiana appointed visiting teachers. A State committee drew up the certification requirements for visiting teachers, and the State Board of Education approved the recommendations in 1945. The approved certification, however, differed from what Orleans Parish needed and had requested, in that the social work component was omitted. Orleans had had an established School Social Work and Attendance Program since 1927 that had been pioneered by Dr. Carmen Janvier. Orleans, wishing to continue their program, met the certification problem by employing social workers who could certify as visiting teachers. However, when it became increasingly difficult to find social workers with educational credits to meet state certification requirements, Orleans Parish asked for and the State Board of Education approved the certification of Licensed Social Workers as visiting teachers.

In 1958, the State Department of Education, recognizing the growing need for services, expanded the program from one visiting teacher for each school system to one visiting teacher for every 15,000 educable in a school system (the number of children between the ages of 6- 19) residing in a school system, thus increasing the number of visiting teachers statewide and providing additional funding under the Minimum Foundation Program. By the 1974-75 school session, the roster issued by the State Department of Education listed 235 Visiting Teachers, School Social Workers, and Supervisors of Child Welfare and Attendance.

The Professional Organization

From the beginning of compulsory education, these professionals have had a state organization. Originally the association was called the Visiting Teachers Association. Later the Supervisors of Child Welfare and Attendance participated in two state organizations: the Supervisors of Child Welfare and Attendance of the Louisiana Education Association and the Supervisors of Child Welfare and Attendance of Louisiana Association affiliated with the International Association of Pupil Personnel Workers. Since there have been changes in the educational associations of the State, the Supervisors of Child Welfare and Attendance merged the two associations. The organization maintains an affiliation in the International Association of Pupil Personnel Workers which is now named the International Association for Truancy and Dropout Prevention (IATDP).

In 1964, the Louisiana Legislature re-enacted the Louisiana Compulsory School Attendance Law, which had been repealed in 1960 during the integration crisis of that period. Included in the new act was provision for the optional title of the position, either Visiting Teacher or Supervisor of Child Welfare and Attendance. This action prompted the two organizations, the Visiting Teachers Associations of LTA and of LEA, in 1973 to adopt as their official name Supervisors of Child Welfare and Attendance.

Emerging Role

The present roles of the Supervisor of Child Welfare and Attendance and the School Social Worker evolved from their early beginnings in 1945 and have succeeded in earning a place in the school systems of Louisiana. In retrospect, the 1940's were a period of finding and enrolling school children who had never been in school.

The 1950's and early 1960's were a period during which the visiting teachers developed a conviction that, if education was to be required of all children, then these children should be entitled to appropriate educational programs. The supervisors played a significant role in pointing out needs and in getting school boards across the state to recognize and support such services as special education, guidance, health, transportation, low-cost school lunch, curriculum changes.

The late 1960's and the early 1970's emerged as a period of professional growth and development. This role has been influenced through the years by professional workshops for visiting teachers and by their participation in local, state, national, and international professional organizations. The first Visiting Teacher Workshop for professional development was held in 1945, immediately after the appointment of the first thirteen visiting teachers. It was sponsored by the State Department of Education and the Louisiana State University School of Social Welfare. In-service workshops have continued annually. This partnership between education and social work has had an impact on the developing service, has changed the focus of need, and has challenged the personnel to develop their skills and abilities.

In 1972, the Bureau of Student Services was established because of a significant need in the State of Louisiana. The Section Administrator of Child Welfare and Attendance was a vital part of the Bureau.

In 1998, the Bureau of Student Services was eliminated through the Department of Education's reorganization process.

Present Status

The Louisiana Department of Education Child Welfare and Attendance Program office is presently located in the Office of Career and College Readiness, in the Foundational Skills Section. This office has the responsibility, among others, of initiating and identifying effective programs and services to meet the changing needs of local school systems in the areas of attendance, discipline, alternative education, ninth grade academies, and dropout prevention.

To support the efforts of Child Welfare and Attendance (CWA) professionals, in June 2021, the Louisiana Department of Education partnered with the Social Research and Evaluation Center (SREC) at Louisiana State University (LSU) in the College of Human Sciences and Education to create the Louisiana Attendance Alliance Initiative to address chronic absenteeism in Pre-K-12 schools.

The current ratio for CWA professionals to students is 1:7,500.

DESCRIPTION OF THE PROGRAM

In the seventy-seven (77) years of service, the Supervisors of Child Welfare and Attendance have focused on finding and enrolling children in school, recognizing needs, and supporting programs to meet those needs.

Authority

Louisiana statutes provide that the State Department of Education and each local school board shall have the responsibility of assuming the leadership in initiating, maintaining and supervising programs that affect child welfare and attendance.

Title XVII of the 1950 Louisiana Revised Statutes and subsequent amendments spell out rules and regulations concerning child welfare and attendance which should and must be complied with. These statutes deal generally and specifically with compulsory attendance and exemptions to the same; discipline of students, including suspensions and expulsions; duties of state and local supervisory personnel who manage programs for child welfare, adjustment and attendance; duties of principals, teachers and other school personnel to comply with the provisions of the program for child welfare; responsibilities of children and their respective parents or tutors toward compliance with child welfare and attendance laws; methodology to be employed in administering suspensions and expulsions; and the rights of parents or tutors to appeal decisions rendered by the superintendent, or his designee, and the local school board. Additionally, Act 368 and Act 754 make provisions for affording educational opportunities for all children, regardless of their respective exceptionality.

Philosophy

Any society that has the right to insist that its youth be in regular school attendance has the responsibility to assure those in attendance that their tenure will be profitable and will enhance positive self-concepts; will foster adequate human relations; will prepare them to meet the challenges of the present and the future; and will develop a sense of value which will create in them a desire to be contributing members of society.

Inasmuch as the child is obligated to be in regular school attendance, the Child Welfare and Attendance and School Social Work Services programs were instituted so that every child could be afforded the opportunity not only to attend school regularly, but also to receive assistance from those individuals whose responsibility it is to serve as liaison with the school and community in a concerted effort to identify and eliminate, alleviate or ameliorate undesirable conditions that have an adverse effect upon the child's adjustment to his educational environment.

Objectives

The goals set forth in the philosophy will be accomplished by meeting the following objectives:

1. To assist other school personnel in the development of success-oriented programs designed to enhance a positive self-image in each child.
2. To create an awareness of the problems that adversely affects the learning process.
3. To render consultative service to other school personnel, parents, and the community relative to the problems affecting attendance and adjustment.
4. To collaborate with community agencies in diagnosing, prescribing and implementing effective comprehensive health programs designed to meet the needs of each child.
5. To supervise, develop, and interpret research data on the attendance and adjustment of children.
6. To enforce the Louisiana Compulsory School Attendance Law.
7. To supervise and maintain the continuing census and dropout and suspension data.

IDENTIFICATION AND INTERPRETATION OF ROLES AND FUNCTIONS

The role of the Supervisor of Child Welfare and Attendance (SCWA) and the School Social Worker (SSW) is to provide the highest quality support system characterized by family-friendly responsiveness to the concerns of the students, families and schools served to support attendance, academic achievement, and social development. leadership in the establishment and maintenance of an effective school program for the proper adjustment of the child. The SCWA and the SSW accomplish this function by working with parents, students, and school personnel, by coordinating with community partners to develop comprehensive and success-oriented plans that will maximize student potential, and create awareness of psycho-social needs that adversely affect the learning processes of students. services and resources to proactively identify and support concerning problems that interfere with the satisfactory school adjustment and/or achievement of individual students. The Louisiana statutes charge the SCWA with the responsibility of assuring that every child is in regular attendance and with the responsibility of filing charges to enforce the Compulsory School Attendance Law when necessary.

The development of an effective school program calls for knowledge as to which students present problems. Therefore, the SCWA and the SSW must work with the school in developing and maintaining procedures for daily identification of students with problems in the areas of absenteeism, tardiness, class cutting, violence, health, and any other risky behaviors, and school related adjustment problems. Once the students with problems have been identified, studies must be made by the SCWA/SSW to determine the degree of the problems and underlying causal factors. In cooperation with the students, the appropriate plans are formulated to solve or alleviate the problems to the extent that the children are able to improve. Utilization of student assistance teams is encouraged.

If a student's problem is school-centered, the SCWA/SSW must collaborate with teachers, principals, guidance counselors, psychologists, etc. in eliminating or ameliorating the problem so that the child can proceed toward satisfactory adjustment. This assistance may best be accomplished by such procedures as curricular changes, adjustments in interpersonal relationships, and/or modifications within the classroom. If needed curricular offerings or school services are not available, the SCWA/SSW must point up this fact and encourage the school system to provide or develop them.

If a student's problem is home-centered, the SCWA/SSW must involve the parents and other individuals in the home in an effort to modify conditions which influence the child. If a student's problem is other than home-centered or school-centered, the SCWA or the SSW must attempt to involve and coordinate community agencies or resources to procure needed services. If the appropriate resources are not available, the SCWA/SSW must point up this fact and encourage the development of the desirable resources. Continuing evaluation and assessment must be made to determine whether it is desirable to modify the original approach to the case or to use a different approach. The SCWA/SSA gives leadership in making the contacts for the evaluation with those who were involved in initiating the original approach.

In addition to providing direct services to individual students with adjustment and/or attendance problems, the SCWA/SSW encourages school personnel to develop a school-wide awareness of regular school attendance through special assembly programs, homeroom guidance activities, bulletin board displays, student awards, parental involvement in school activities, and cultivation of a genuine interest of the principal and faculty in individual students.

In working to help students with their school adjustment and/or attendance problems, the SCWA/SSW uses the following: serving as consultants to school personnel in identifying and referring children with problems; assisting in determining the degree of the problem, and in the selection of children to receive direct services; planning for the solution of the problems; implementing the plan; evaluating and assessing the plan; and proposing an alternate plan when necessary.

The effective adjustment and/or attendance of children in school depend largely upon the attitudes and feelings of their parents toward the school. The SCWA and the SSW serve as catalysts in fostering good working relationships between the parent and the school by suggesting and encouraging parent involvement programs, such as small interest groups or classes for parents at the school, volunteer services to the school, and attendance and participation in various school programs and special events. Special individual help is given in involving hard-to-reach parents.

A necessary component of effective pupil personnel services is an adequate census and child accounting system, supervised by the SCWA under the direction of the State Department of Education.

It is the responsibility of the SCWA/SSW

- to assist in the development of success-oriented programs designed to enhance a positive self-image for each child, such as Career Education;
- to give consultative services on school adjustment problems to all school personnel and parents on behalf of many children who are not referred for direct services;
- to provide leadership in eliminating or ameliorating undesirable environmental conditions that interfere with the learning process;
- to supervise, develop, and interpret research data on attendance and adjustment problems of children, accounting for all educables, studying the problem of dropouts and the causes of poor attendance;
- to supervise the maintenance of the continuing census; and
- to ensure the SCWA and SSW Program as an integral part of the total program of public education in Louisiana, which requires professional competence and continuous professional growth.

In the interest of the individual child, it is necessary that the SCWA/SSW contact and utilize all services and resources within and outside the school. The role of the SCWA/SSW is dynamic and changes as the need for services is identified, initiated and implemented. As changes in society emerge, the SCWA and the SSW endeavor to provide leadership in the modification of public education to meet the needs of all students.

NOTE: The title of Visiting Teacher was established in 1944. That title was changed to Supervisor of Child Welfare and Attendance, although the change was not mandatory (Act 109 of 1964). Role redefined by Visiting Teachers Association, April 1973.

FAMILY EDUCATIONAL RIGHTS AND PRIVACY ACT (FERPA)

The Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA) (20 U.S.C. § 1232g; 34 CFR Part 99) is a Federal law that protects the privacy of student education records. The law applies to all schools that receive funds under an applicable program of the U.S. Department of Education.

FERPA gives parents certain rights with respect to their children's education records. These rights transfer to the student when he or she reaches the age of 18 or attends a school beyond the high school level. Students to whom the rights have transferred are "eligible students."

- Parents or eligible students have the right to inspect and review the student's education records maintained by the school. Schools are not required to provide copies of records unless, for reasons such as great distance, it is impossible for parents or eligible students to review the records. Schools may charge a fee for copies.
- Parents or eligible students have the right to request that a school correct records which they believe to be inaccurate or misleading. If the school decides not to amend the record, the parent or eligible student then has the right to a formal hearing. After the hearing, if the school still decides not to amend the record, the parent or eligible student has the right to place a statement with the record setting forth his or her view about the contested information.
- Generally, schools must have written permission from the parent or eligible student in order to release any information from a student's education record. However, FERPA allows schools to disclose those records, without consent, to the following parties or under the following conditions (34 CFR § 99.31):
 - School officials with legitimate educational interest;
 - Other schools to which a student is transferring;
 - Specified officials for audit or evaluation purposes;
 - Appropriate parties in connection with financial aid to a student;
 - Organizations conducting certain studies for or on behalf of the school;
 - Accrediting organizations;

- To comply with a judicial order or lawfully issued subpoena;
- Appropriate officials in cases of health and safety emergencies; and
- State and local authorities, within a juvenile justice system, pursuant to specific State law.

Schools may disclose, without consent, "directory" information such as a student's name, address, telephone number, date and place of birth, honors and awards, and dates of attendance. However, schools must tell parents and eligible students about directory information and allow parents and eligible students a reasonable amount of time to request that the school not disclose directory information about them. Schools must notify parents and eligible students annually of their rights under FERPA. The actual means of notification (special letter, inclusion in a PTA bulletin, student handbook, or newspaper article) is left to the discretion of each school.

ATTENDANCE CODES

Attendance Descriptions

Code Value	Description	Absence Reason Code Description
01	Non-exempted, Excused absences	Non-Exempted and Excused: The student is allowed to make up the missed work but the absence is counted against the attendance requirement. An example is personal or family illness documented by a parent’s note. The number of non-exempt and excused absences is based on the number of school days offered. Schools are required to offer 177 days of school, which means a student can be absent for ten days. If more school days are offered, then the number of absences also increases.
02	Exempted, Excused Absences	Exempted and Excused: The student is allowed to make up the missed work and the absence is not counted against the attendance requirement. Examples are extended illness documented by a doctor or to celebrate religious holidays. There is no limit to these absences.
03	Unexcused Absence	Unexcused: The student is not allowed to make up the missed work and the absence is counted against the attendance requirement. An example is skipping school.
